

DECLASSIFIED

Tuesday, February 10, 1953

Wendell Endicott from Boston, Avra Warren, our ex-Ambassador to Pakistan, Virgil Johnson, head of Sears, Roebuck in Savannah, and General Caldwell (who lives on the place and was formerly Jim's Air Attaché in Argentina) joined us this morning.

I had a message from the mainland that I should urgently call Foster Dulles in Washington. Accordingly, I put in two or three hours going back and forth to Bluffton, only to find he was on the Hill and I would have to telephone tonight. I spent a couple of hours with the others hunting turkeys on Corn Island. Four were killed, but I did not get a shot. I returned to Bluffton in the afternoon, telephoned Foster, and was told by him that the President and himself would like me to undertake a special mission ~~very~~ shortly to the Six Nation Community, which they would ^{like to} discuss with me next week in Washington. I told him I would alter my plans and be there.
